On October 19, 2017, at approximately 9:30 a.m., James Perry entered Whole Foods (760 S. Sepulveda Blvd.) with a large canvas bag concealed in his pants. He loaded the canvas bag and his pants with approximately $970 worth of wine and walked toward the exit, where he was confronted by a security guard. He surrendered the canvas bag, but walked out of the store with several wine bottles still in his pants. When security and a manager attempted to follow Perry to his vehicle, he threatened to go home to get his guns and come back to “get” the employees. On October 21, 2017, Perry was arrested in Los Angeles.
